THE HIV/AIDS CRISIS IS NOT OVER

Forty years after the first cases of a syndrome (AIDS) were identified and after the appearance of the underlying virus (HIV), the virus is still circulating. It has caused personal and collective traumas, and revived historical structures, and revived historical structures. Societies bear the legacies of the virus. Understanding the virus persist. HIV/AIDS affects certain populations, and efforts are being made to reduce inequalities and to improve access to treatment.

The exhibition traces the social and cultural history of the virus through various objects that were displayed by the Mucem's permanent exhibition and Traditions, in the form of different forms of HIV/AIDS. The result of a long collaboration with HIV, caregivers,
